

Contributors

(Affiliations and titles are correct as of the time of the workshop.)

Phoak Kung (Chapter 1) is Vice President for Academic Affairs and Professor of Political Science at Mengly J. Quach University. He is doing his PhD in Political Economy at the University of Warwick in the United Kingdom. He has also been Senior Research Fellow at the Cambodian Institute for Cooperation and Peace since 2013. He used to be Visiting Fellow at the University of Oxford and Cornell University in 2013 and 2012 respectively. He obtained his Graduate Diploma of Public Administration and Master in Economic Policy at the Australian National University in Australia. He also earned his Bachelor Degree in Mechanical and Industrial Engineering at the Institute of Technology of Cambodia. He was previously Assistant Dean and Professor of Political Science in the Faculty of Social Sciences and International Relations at Paññāsāstra University of Cambodia. He was also Senior Lecturer at Limkokwing University of Creative Technology and the University of Cambodia. He has received a number of awards such as Harvard Yenching Doctoral Scholar, Cornell University Fellowship and the Australian Development Scholarship.

Iis Gindarsah (Chapter 2) is a Researcher in the Department of Politics and International Relations at the Centre for Strategic and International Studies (CSIS), Jakarta. He holds a Master's degree in Strategic Studies at the S. Rajaratnam School of International Studies, Nanyang Technological University (2010). He also earned a Master's degree on International Relations from the Faculty of Social and Political Sciences, University of Indonesia (2009). His research interests are military transformation, defense technological innovations, civil-military relations, and international security. His essays and commentaries on the subject have been published in edited volumes, peer-reviewed journal and media outlets—including Contemporary South East Asia, RSIS Commentaries, and The Jakarta Post.

Benny Teh Cheng Guan (Chapter 3) is Associate Professor at the School of Social Sciences, Universiti Sains Malaysia (USM), Penang. His research interests include East Asian regionalism, ASEAN community building, traditional security, human security and the politics of free trade agreements. He is the editor of Foreign Policy and Security in an Asian Century: Threats, Strategies and Policy Choices (World Scientific, 2014) and Human Security: Securing East Asia's Future (Springer, 2012).

Tin Maung Maung Than (Chapter 4), a Myanmar national, is a Senior Visiting Fellow at the ISEAS Yusof-Ishak Institute, Singapore where he is a member of its Regional Strategic and Political Studies Programme. He has a Masters in nuclear physics from the Rangoon Arts & Science University and a graduate diploma in economic planning from the Rangoon Institute of Economics, as well as a Ph.D. in politics from the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London. Currently, he is a member of the International Institute for Strategic Studies (London) and the Association for Asian Studies (USA). He is the author of State Dominance in Myanmar: The Political Economy of Industrialization (Singapore: ISEAS, 2007) and his latest publication is a country chapter on “Myanmar,” in Security Sector Reform and Democratization: A Comparative Perspective, (Geneva: Geneva Centre for the Democratic Control of Armed Forces, forthcoming). His research interests include: political economy of development, democratization and civil-military relations in developing countries, human security, nuclear proliferation, Myanmar politics, and economics.

Aries A. Arugay, PhD (Chapter 5) is Associate Professor of Political Science from the University of the Philippines in Diliman. He is also Executive Director of the Institute for Strategic and Development Studies, Inc., a policy think-tank on Asia-Pacific regional security issues. He obtained his PhD in Political Science from Georgia State University as a Fulbright Fellow. His doctoral dissertation compared civil society mobilization and regime crises in four young democracies: Bolivia, the Philippines, Thailand, and Venezuela. He had conducted research and published on topics such as comparative democratization, electoral politics, civil-military relations, contentious politics, security sector reform, and regionalism in Southeast Asia. In 2015, he was selected as a Young Southeast Asian Fellow by the Southeast Asia Research Group (SEAREG).

Lam Peng Er (Chapter 6) is a Senior Research Fellow at the East Asian Institute, National University of Singapore. He was a Visiting Fellow at NIDS from December 2009-March 2010. He obtained his Ph.D. from Columbia University. His latest single-authored book is titled Japan's Peace-building Diplomacy in Asia: Seeking a more active political role (New York and London: Routledge, 2009).

Thitinan Pongsudhirak (Chapter 7) is Director of the Institute of Security and International Studies (ISIS) and Associate Professor of International Political Economy at the Faculty of Political Science, Chulalongkorn University. He has authored a host of articles, books, and book chapters on Thai politics, political economy, foreign policy, and media as well as ASEAN and East Asian security and economic cooperation. His award-winning Ph.D. was taken at the London School of Economics. A frequent analyst in the international media, his recent publications include: "Thailand's Uneasy Passage," Journal of Democracy (April-June 2012); "Thailand" in Ann Capling and Patrick Low (eds.), Governments, Non-State Actors and Trade Policy-Making (Cambridge, UK: Cambridge University Press, 2010); "Between Continuity and Change: Thailand's Topsy-Turvy Foreign Policy Directions" in Global Asia. He serves on the editorial boards of several academic journals and has held visiting positions at Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies and Stanford University.

Tran Truong Thuy (Chapter 8) is Director of the Foundation for East Sea Studies, Diplomatic Academy of Vietnam (DAV). Before joining the DAV, he worked in the European Department at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Vietnam. His research interests are in security studies, maritime issues in Asia, and the international relations of Southeast Asia. He has written extensively on maritime issues and contributed several reports and policy recommendations on South China Sea issues.

You Ji (Chapter 9) is Professor of International Relations in the Department of Government and Public Administration at the University of Macau. He holds a Ph.D. and M.A. from the Australian National University and a B.A. from Peking University. Previously, he was a Reader in the School of Social Sciences at the University of New South Wales. His research focuses on China's political and economic reforms, elite politics, military modernization, and foreign policy. Dr. You is the author of three books, including China's Enterprise Reform (Routledge, 2013) and The Armed Forces of China (I.B. Tauris, 1999). He has also published numerous book chapters and articles in journals including Problems of Communism, International Journal of Korean Unification Studies, The China Journal, Pacific Review, Comparative Strategy, Asia Policy, Japanese Studies, Contemporary Southeast Asia, the Naval War College Review, Strategic Analysis, Journal of Contemporary China, and Contemporary Security Policy. He sits on the editorial board of eight academic journals including The China Journal, Issues and Studies, and Journal of Contemporary China.

Ganbat Damba (Chapter 10) is Director of the Institute for Strategic Studies (ISS), National Security Council of Mongolia. Prior to joining ISS, he worked for Prime Minister's Office as an expert for Aid Coordination Unit, Academy of Political Education as Executive Director, and Liberty Graduate School of Social Science as Director. He obtained his Ph.D. in political science from Academy of Science of Mongolia.

Hiroshi Yamazoe (Chapter 11) is a Senior Research Fellow of the National Institute for Defense Studies (NIDS), Ministry of Defense, Japan. His research interests are mainly Russian security policy and international history in East Asia. His works include "The Prospects and Limits of the Russia-China Partnership," RUFBS Briefing (Swedish Defense Research Agency), No.32, December 2015; "Russian advance to the East in the middle of 19th century" in Takashi Okamoto ed., Suzerainty and World History (Nagoya University Press, 2014, in Japanese); and International Conventional Weapons Market and Russia (Toyo Shoten, 2014, in Japanese). He obtained an MA in Russian Studies from School of Slavonic and East European Studies, University College London in 2005, and a Ph.D. in Human and Environmental Studies from Kyoto University in 2008.